FLOUR MILL

Of Wheeler & Davis Totally Destroyed By Fire—Heretic Work of Citizens Saves the Town.

The flour mill and warehouse of Wheeler & Davis in Jefferson town were totally destroyed by fire of unknown origin at a late hour of Thursday night. The blaze was discovered at 11 o'clock, but it had gained such headway that it was impossible to check the flames. The entire population of the town turned out and formed a bucket brigade in the hope of extinguishing the fire.

For a time it was believed by telephone that the whole town was doomed, and great excitement prevailed. Chief Timothy Lehan, of the Louisville fire department, was notified by telephone and was asked for immediate aid. In short order a special car, loaded with chemical engines, and other fire apparatus, was on its way to Jefferson town.

With Chief Lehan and Capt. Sam Reese in charge, and ten men aboard, the electric car was started by the town. No. 2 hook and ladder house at Hancock and Jefferson streets. Upon arriving at Baxter and Highland streets, the car was stopped by Chief Lehan and was notified that a telephone message had been received from Jefferson town stating that the fire was under control. The car was then turned back.

The fire was discovered by Mrs. Davis, wife of one of the members of the building, and was caused by a directly across from the mill and immediately gave the alarm and around the town. The bucket brigade was soon formed and the fire was under control.

Several attempts were made to enter the burning structure, but because of the density of the smoke each effort was a failure. The flames raged so fiercely for a time that a number of other buildings caught fire. The Christian church was threatened, but owing to the fact that it is a brick building with metal roof it was saved.

It is believed that the fire originated in the engine room of the mill, but the exact cause is not known. The total loss probably will reach $5,000. This amount is partially covered by insurance.

The residences of Messrs. Wheeler and Davis just across the street were ignited by the flames several times, but the best fire brigade in the city, the fire. The Davis dwelling is considerably damaged by being scorched.

Messrs. Davis and Wheeler are splendid citizens and would be people regret their misfortune. As yet they are undecided about rebuilding.

TAKES LEAD

Miss Pearl Rooksby Starts Off With 7,600 Votes.

The Jeffersonian-Merchants' Popularity Contest in First Magisterial District Will Close August 27, 1910.

The vote to date follows:

Miss Pearl Rooksby, Anchorage 7,600 Miss Lila Brooks, Middletown 4,000 Miss Ruth Hall, St. Matthews 4,000 Miss Lillie Wetherby, Middletown 2,800
Miss Mary Hoke, R. B. Harrod's Creek 100 Miss Nellie Chason, Worthington 100 Miss Lena Wood, Louisville 100 Miss Edith Sturgeon, Eastwood 100 Miss Gertrude Swan, Middletown 100 Miss Nora Tucker, Middletown 100 Miss Elizabeth Roman, Middletown 100
Miss Pamela White, I. S. A. 100

The extra vote from July 1st to 13th made the young ladies in the contest "get busy," and as a consequence they have a large vote registered opposite their names. Miss Pearl Rooksby, of Anchorage, waited until last Saturday to enter the contest, but immediately went to work calling up her friends and by Tuesday evening—just four days—had secured 25 subscriptions, giving her 7,600 votes on account of the extra vote of 1,000 extra with each five subscriptions turned in at one time. This placed her in the lead right from the start. It is needless to say she is a popular girl.

The other girls have not been asleep, as may be noticed from their totals this week. Misses Hall, Brooks and Wetherby have all taken advantage of the extra vote offer and are strong contenders for first prize. Never before has The Jeffersonian given a contest and had more popular and pretty girls to try for the prizes. All of them are from the best families of the county and their friends are just beginning to work for them. The first two prizes are so near the same value that the winner will be allowed to select either one she wishes, the second to take the prize she does not select, and the third to receive the $20 prize.

The contest will close on August 27, 1910, promptly at 3 o'clock p. m. We have delayed announcing the end of the contest until now because we knew our contestants would enter and we desired to give all plenty of time. So, please keep in mind the close. No votes will be awarded after 3 o'clock p. m. on August 27.

Another Extra Vote Offer.

For each three subscriptions to The Jeffersonian at $1.00 turned in at one time at this office between July 15th and July 30th, 100 extra votes will be given if six subscriptions are sent in at one time 1,000 votes will be awarded, and so on.

Chas. E. Seng at the same time will give 500 votes with each cash purchase of $1.00 at his store, 306 East Market St., Louisville.

Beys Property at Lyndon.

The Dr. W. E. Grant property at Lyndon has been purchased by the Southern National Life Insurance Company, and may be used in the near future for its offices. Quite an item in city taxes would be saved by such a move, if made before September 1. The property was bought as an investment, according to H. H. Poindester, secretary of the company, with the idea that the company would have some place to go should it decide to move its main offices.

The property consists of a twelve-room house and five acres of land. Although the property is valued at $10,000 it is understood that the consideration was in the neighborhood of $6,000.

Little Lucy Clara, aged eighteen months, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. C. P. Burnett, died at her home at Paduchan on the third of July. The little one had measles, and pneumonia developed. "OLD GLOOM" is an expression you frequently hear when people refer to the United States flag, yet it is no older than the time of the admission of a territory into the union. Mr.
Ben. F. Alford, who has frequently contributed to The Jeffersonian, suggests a very good change, which should be adopted. We want to have one flag—and only one. Sometimes you see flags with 48 stars on it, suggesting 48 states, when in fact we have only 46. A return to the flag of 13 stars will suggest unity and errors. Read Mr. Alford's article in another column.

We have always thought U. S.
Senator Rolt L. Taylor, of Tennessee had the biggest and warmest heart of any man in the South, but when he agreed to speak in Tennessee in behalf of Gov. Patterson's judiciary ticket, he caused us to lose faith in him. However, he has announced that the Democracy of Tennessee is rushing madly to destruction through its bitter dissensions on account of Patterson pardoning Duncan C. Cooper, who was convicted of the murder of former Senator R. W.
Carmack, and that he can not inflict his advice where it is rejected in advance. Good for the Democracy of Tennessee and for Rolt Taylor, for refusing to speak in behalf of a man whom the people of the whole South condemn for setting free a man said to be guilty of the murder of a fellow murder of a well known and lovable man.

RANDOM SHOTS

Taxel Taxel Taxel

We have an abundance of taxes with the State Board of Equalization endeavoring to raise our assessment 25 per cent and the Board of the Education assessing us 20 per cent. It seems to me that the tax-payer will sooner or later awake to the situation. Taxes are not a burden on the people when used wisely, but are all of our tax moneys used that way I say "nit".

Public Schools.

Oh, God, let me hide my face in shame while I write the truth, and nothing but the truth. We haven't any scarcely worth mentioning.

Why, our schools are not as good as they were twenty-five years ago.

One reason I will give is this: The most of our schools are taught by girls just beginning to teach who ought to yet be in school themselves.

So many of them ought to take Mr.
J. B. McFerran's advice and avail themselves of the opportunity of attending the Normal schools that we have been taxed to build and maintain for their benefit. Where is the young teacher that cannot read and $40 to pay board for six weeks? I know a great many of the young teachers are poor, but they must strive to become better qualified to fill the higher places in life. Then they will be paid still better for their services. I am not writing in fear of criticism. Mr. McFerran said, for criticism is akin to the devil, as it is seldom ever used rightly.

Unless there is a great change in the public schools in the near future, my five children must be educated elsewhere. For my part, I am in favor of a consolidated school some where in the country. At $250 per annum how long would it take to build a good school building in the county and put a good teacher or two in it? Not very many years.

One of the best schools in the county last Middleton, with a good principal and one of the best primary teachers in the state. Now, if the schools are where they should be, why did Dr. S. D.
Wetherby and Mr. McFerran after visiting the schools make such a noise about the schools? I know of no fight to consolidate enough of them so we might have at least one better school in the county? Fifty years ago a consolidated school would have been an impossibility in this county, but now it is not. Look at the difference of our roads today and of even ten years ago. I know the roads of Indiana are laid off very different from ours, but where there is a will there is a way. Hasten the day when we can have three or four consolidated schools in the county, so we do not have to say Louisville to teach our children.

Officers Should Resign.

I have lately heard some news over the radio of the chief of police and the chief of the detective forces of Louisville are thinking about offering their resignations. If the body of a twenty-year-old girl could be buried inside of the city limits under twelve inches of dirt that I could not find I would resign if I were them.

A Shot at the Railway Co.

Have you Jeffersontown folks rode home on your wonderful interurban can lately at certain hours of the day, and pay 15 cents to ride in a car with two car loads of people on and stood up all the way home? If you did I hope before the summer is over the company will make some change in your heads or either walk home or pay two fares for either privilege. It would be very impolite for you to insist on the Company paying the extra car at those hours. So, do not do it.

Keep Out of the War.

The automobile people are framing a bill, I am told, for the next Legislature to keep people off the roads with horses and vehicles. They already have been allowed the court of the county to put their signs boards all over the county, "sharp curve in the road" and "danger one hundred yards ahead." If they are not going at a rate of speed away above the speed limit they could stop in less than 100 yards. I saw one pass the other day that went so fast that it seemed to only touch the ground about every twenty feet. Sit still, you old farmers and clock-hoppers, and don't assert your rights, for you haven't any, no how.

You have, no doubt, heard the old saying "that a rolling stone gathers no moss," which is very true, but there is a little more to it than that.
It is in this part of the world known as the American Society of Equity that is not gathering moss, but the very best material in the county to build an organization that will harm no one and be a benefit to tens of thousands of people. The middlemen and the gamblers already have a face to face with their doom. They are already beginning to make a difference in prices in favor of the poor Equitians man. The Louisville coal merchants one day last week raised the price of coal 25 cents on the ton just to accommodate the people and the coal people to the accompaniment of the coal people—just about a few thousand of dollars per day. That is all right, but don't make any difference to us, because we have to have this coal. The farmer has had a somewhat body's price and pay at another's price. No wonder he never has any money in his pocket. But the farmer's millenium is beginning to dawn —not the last days, but the best ones.

CHAPTER XXXI.
Good-bye.

Hazelhurst was in an uproar. The day for Nina's departure had come.
It was just two weeks to the day since they had received the letter from Belle Norval, and she was now leaving him forever. She stood upon the front porch, bidding farewell to her relatives and a few neighbors, who had called to see her one, more out of curiosity than from any love of the proud girl. Among the others was Walter Lyon. Who for the past week had been a frequent visitor at Hazelhurst Lane and called this afternoon to bid Nina farewell.
Larne Gilman was still a guest at Hazelhurst, and Nina secretly regretted leaving him for the time being.
However, no one knew her secret thoughts and much less would have suspected them as she stood there with that radiant, smiling face. She looked very regal and stately, as if in a becoming traveling suit of silver gray, with a hat of the same color with drooping gray plumes shading her brilliant, laughing face. Her cheeks glowed with excitement; her black eyes sparkled and not the suspicion of a tear dimmed their brightness, although she was about to bid farewell to her best and dearest earthly friends—her parents.

When she came to bid Walter Lyon goodbye, she gave him only the tips of her fingers, saying with a mysterious look:

"Good-bye, Mr. Lyon, and when you again see Della Vincent give the poor girl my love."

Walter Lyon started back, white as death, uttering a low cry of disbelief and staggered, but when he recovered, he stood there gazing at Nina with a look of horror in his eyes. In the excitement of the moment he had not noticed that she had changed her dress, who was also present.

"What the deuce is the matter with that fellow?" said Fred in an undertone, addressing her father.

"He has the heart disease, I believe, and very often has the same sight attacks," answered Larne, trying to look indifferently. Look at the observed that he was somewhat confused.

This little by-play had occurred in a few seconds, and turning away, Nina said to her father, "Good-bye, papa," and, kissing him several times.

"Good-bye, my child," said the old farmer, embracing her affectionately.

"I hope, Nina, you will never regret this trip. Remember I have not wanted you to go, but you overruled my objections, and will go. If you any harm should befall you upon this journey, remember, it is your own doing, as you would not listen to your father's advice."

"Do not be fanciful, papa," she replied, with a slight frown. "Rest assured that I am quite able to take care of myself anywhere."

As her father released her, she threw her arms about her mother's neck, and buried her face upon her breast.

"Darling, my darling, good-bye," she cried, with quivering lips and misty eyes, though she was far too proud to weep in the presence of those who stood about her. Even the old farmer that mother who she loved—went to herself—better than anyone else could.

Mrs. Hazelton's arms closed tight about Nina's quivering form, while the tears rolled down her pale cheeks.

"O, my darling, how it grieves me to have you leave, but you must go.
Kiss me again and again. You are going into an unknown world, an unknown life before you; but remember, my darling, you will find your voice trembling with emotion.
Remember there is one who watches over all. Put your trust in God, have faith in Him, and all will be well. You are about to enter the wicked, sinful world of society, from which I was taken when I married your father. Knowing your proud ambitious nature, dear, I tremble for you, fearing that your heart may become changed toward those you love and who love you. My darling, do not enter, body and soul, into the ways of the world, and become changed from an innocent, pure, hearted, country girl into a false creature. Be true to yourself at all times; and never forget the loved ones at home. Trusting that you will remember my words, I bid you good-bye, praying that God may watch over you and keep you until we meet again."

It was a touching scene, as mother and daughter stood apart, and the others, arms making their last sad adieu. Although they knew it not, it was the last time they should meet upon this earth.

Nina and Larne Gilman had each bade each other an affectionate good-bye; while Play, poor, pale, little Play, stood mutely awaiting her turn. Her lips trembled and the crystal tears were thick upon her long silken lashes.

"Are you really so sorry to see me go?" said Nina, her voice soft.

"Yes, my darling, but she could not grieve for her sister."

"Yes, I am sorry, Nina, then mam-

A TALKING FLAG.

The "Old Flag."

The "Old Flag" Up-to-Date.

46

The Flag of Washington, the Flag of the Revolution, first hoisted at sea by John Paul Jones on the ship Ranger.

To reduce expense and increase efficiency of government and lessen the dangers of our country's defenders should be the constant aim of every citizen of our republic. One great expense of our government is in the making and altering of flags.

In our colonial flag the flag of Washington; of the revolution there were thirteen stripes and thirteen stars. We are able to inflict upon our foes more stripes, and of greater severity than we were then, but the number of stripes have not been increased, or our flag would have lost its distinctness, and looked more like a "bat or mouse" worn carpet, than the flag of a great nation.

The stars have been increased to 48, and will continue to increase with each State admitted until it will, later on, look like a mass of dots, instead of a constellation of small stars.

We talk of the "old flag"; we have no "old" flag, it is a chameleon flag, constantly changing; flags are not made merely for show on parade but for ensigns on duty and in battle. Our country's standard should be plain and distinct, or amid the din and smoke of battle it might be mistaken for the flag of the enemy, and our soldiers slay each other by mistake.

As the number of stripes have not been increased why increase the number of stars? The thirty-three stars added since took part in achieving American independence. Like you and I they were born here. They were not only our fathers, but our grandfathers. Some of them were outside of this country at that time; they were the foreign powers, and to rank them with the original thirteen stars, the pioneers of liberty, is to insult to them; it detracts from the glory that rightly belongs to the thirteen stars only.

By the instrument of July 4th, 1776, the thirteen stars boldly asserted their own freedom of the superior power of the British Crown; fought for, won and established their own liberty, and bequeathed that liberty to the thirty-three stars, and to all who may hereafter be born into our great union of States.

The 13 stars were Deities of Liberty. The 23 stars were Heroes of Liberty. The 13 stars were Founders of Government. The 23 stars added, as stars upon the blue field of our flag not only add a great and needless cost of money, time and trouble in making, altering and exchanging flags, but being many to count, confusion; not one in ten would swear to the number of States in the Union right after troops with the flag has passed by them. I have submitted to the government a sample of a practical, less costly, plainer, more representative, historical design of flag, viz: The original design of thirteen stripes and thirteen stars within the circle (or square) of which have total number of States (48). It is not a new departure, but a return to the original design with the instructive figures added. Such a flag would talk, tell its own story. A child could count the number of States in the Union at sight of it. Again if a new State is admitted, instead of rearranging ninety-two stars on each of our many flags, (on each side) and adding one more stripe, there would by my method be no figure out to change; the figure could be mailed to distant army posts, and to our vessels in foreign waters, and sewed on there; no delay or trouble of "calling in" flags and sending them to and from, for rearranging the many stars. In making new flags there would be sixty-six less stars to cut and sew on (thirty-three on each side of each flag). It would save much time, much of the taxpayer's money, and be a neater, bolder, more stable, instructive, and truthful emblem of our great and growing republic than it now is.

We have yet a vast area to people, to divide, subdivide, and promote to Statehood; each State admitted makes the flag less distinct. We don't want a jumbled mass of stars, hence a change in method of enumeration is imperative. It is not optional with us; we will be forced to do it later on. There will be no room upon the blue field of our flag to place the additional stars, hence the time to make that change is NOW.

The people are waking up; they demand economy and business methods by government officials; the adoption of the "old flag" with its thirteen parent stars encircling the total number of United States in figures will be one step in that direction; it will also give more safety to our soldiers and marines in battle. Let all patriotic orders consider it and urge the change upon their Senators and Congressmen at once. B. F. ARONSON, P. S. There are now so many stars on our flag that fancy cuts of stars rarely correct. Buy only the flag that has 48 stars, or four different cuts of it.
